Overview

Five unhurried days in the capital, pairing the Forbidden City and hutong life with a full day of exploring the unrestored ridges of Jinshanling.

Suggested journey

Part 1

Beijing rewards travelers who slow down. This five-day journey begins with the ceremony at the Forbidden City, Tiananmen and the Temple of Heaven — then slips into the hutongs through courtyard doors and everyday life.

Part 2

The centerpiece is a full day at Jinshanling, where the wall climbs over forested ridges vaster than Badaling. We walk a quiet section with a local guide, stop for a picnic and return as the sun sets.

Part 3

Evenings are left free: a Peking duck dinner, a tea house, or simply a quiet courtyard home. A vehicle throughout keeps the pace comfortable for families and first-time visitors.
